Beyond the Mirror

Beyond the mirror, my reflection looked at me and whispered,
"Is that smile really yours?"

I smiled again, but somewhere inside me, a storm was already awake.

There were so many emotions I had hidden behind my face—fears I never spoke of, tears I never allowed to fall, and questions I kept asking myself.

The reflection asked, "What is really inside you?"

Am I really confident? Am I really strong?

And what if I lose myself while trying to be everything for everyone?
I had no answer.

Only my eyes answered me with a quiet ocean of tears.

"No. Don't let fear decide your story. Break free, my dear."

So I gathered my thoughts, even the broken ones, and began fighting a battle that nobody could see.

But my soul kept speaking softly—"It's okay to be afraid. It is okay to cry.

It is okay to doubt yourself sometimes."

Beyond the mirror, there are not always smiles.

Sometimes there is fear. Sometimes, there are tears.

Sometimes there is that little voice that says, "You are not enough."

Perhaps being strong does not mean never breaking down.

Perhaps strength is wiping your tears and still choosing to stand."

Then my reflection smiled at me and said, "You are a flame."

Those words stayed with me. If my own reflection can still believe in me, then why should I stop believing in myself?

So I will take my problems with me.

I will take my fears too. I will take every doubt that once tried to hold me back. And I will try.

I will learn. I will fight my thoughts. I will rise again. And I will fly—not because I have no fear, but because I have decided that fear will not choose how high I can go.

My heart is finally breaking the mirror of fear. And beyond its broken pieces, I can see something new—not a perfect me, not a fearless me, but a real me who still wants to fly.
